

An Open Letter to Congressional Appropriations Committees
In Support of the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP)

Dear House and Senate Appropriators:

The Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) is the cornerstone federal grant program designed to protect and assist vulnerable households in preserving uninterrupted utility service and maintaining safe temperatures inside their homes. LIHEAP supported approximately 6 million American households with energy affordability last year.

In light of the crucial safety net function of this program in protecting our nation's elders, individuals with disabilities, and families with very young children, the National Energy and Utility Affordability Coalition (NEUAC) and the supporters below respectfully request Congress defend and improve LIHEAP funding for FY21. This will send a strong message of support for the health and well-being of those fragile households struggling to maintain energy security.

LIHEAP serves a vital life-saving role, protecting households from the risks associated with dangerous indoor air temperatures during heat waves and deep freezes. In 2018, a deadly polar vortex stalled over parts of America resulting in the deaths of 22 people. Heatwaves also can be extremely dangerous, causing dehydration, distress, and heatstroke. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) reported that 3,442 deaths resulted from exposure to extreme heat during 1999-2003. The CDC also noted that air conditioning is the primary protective factor against heat-related illness and death.

The flexibility of LIHEAP as a block grant allows for repair and replacement of HVAC systems, a growing need according to the 2018 National Energy Assistance Survey of LIHEAP recipients (NEAS). Nearly one third of respondents reported they were unable to use their main source of heat because of utility disconnect, inability to pay for fuel delivery, or a damaged heating system.

Elders, young children, and the disabled are most vulnerable to extreme temperatures and thus are targeted by LIHEAP. The NEAS survey reported that 92% of LIHEAP recipient households contain at least one vulnerable person. Nearly half of NEAS respondents reported that one or more persons in the household were age 60 or older. George, a veteran of the armed forces from Maine, said LIHEAP assistance allowed him to focus on paying for other basic needs. He said LIHEAP is an important resource for the senior citizen community:

“Winter in Maine is very hard no matter how you cut it...I need help now when I’m old. I didn’t need it when I was younger because I could take care of myself.”

One in three LIHEAP recipients reported they went without food for at least one day in the prior 12 months. Carol, a LIHEAP recipient from Missouri, wrote to NEUAC:

“I work in a community action agency outreach office and have seen the LIHEAP program help many clients, but the need for LIHEAP became real to me when my husband was unable to work and we were reduced to one income. We were struggling to buy groceries and pay bills. (LIHEAP) was a godsend.”

Despite a growing economy, 40.6 million Americans lived in poverty in 2017 according to U.S. Census data. The Federal Reserve reports that nearly half of American families would struggle to pay emergency expenses of just $400. LIHEAP relieves the pressure to choose between heating and eating, cooling or rent. The program can help maintain continuous utility service or restore service after a utility disconnect. LIHEAP eases the energy burden of those in need while also improving the energy efficiency of households through weatherization services.

LIHEAP is an administratively efficient and effective targeted health and safety program that works to bring fuel costs within a manageable range for eligible families. When people are unable to afford their home energy bills, the implications are deadly serious. One in three NEAS respondents reported using their kitchen stove to heat their home, posing a serious carbon monoxide and fire risk. No one should be forced to resort to such dangerous and drastic means to survive. LIHEAP keeps families safe. It prevents children from having to do their homework in the dark. It relieves financial pressure on families and improves stability in the home.

The NEAS also reported that 82 percent of LIHEAP recipients have an annual income of less than $20,000. With such inadequate resources, even basic needs are likely to go unmet. Many low-wage workers, single parents, and other struggling households are eligible for LIHEAP, but are deprived of a benefit because the funding is quickly exhausted for crises during times of high need. LIHEAP is only able to serve a fraction of those eligible – one in five – at current funding levels.

NEUAC and its national coalition of more than 200 member organizations representing thousands of individuals, along with the hundreds of stakeholders who have signed this letter to support LIHEAP, strongly urge Congress to defend and improve LIHEAP funding in FY21. Adequate resources are vitally important to make energy affordable and help maintain safe indoor air temperatures for the most vulnerable members of our communities.

Thank you for your support of LIHEAP and your consideration for your neighbors, the members of your district assisted by this funding.
